| The theory of “linguistic determinism” was first advocated in the 1950’s. Since then, there has been a prolonged debate over children’s perception of numbers. According to the theory of linguistic determinism, which states that language controls thought patterns, human thoughts depend upon language and if a concept does not have a name in a given language, then the speakers of that language will be at a loss to imagine the concept. A readily understandable concept is that the description of thought is limited by a speaker’s language; this explains the common feeling of not being able to put a thought into words. Although it is hard to determine whether children have an ability to convey their feelings into thoughts or not, at least, the argument that their concept of numbers has been regulated by their native language seems to be supported by a study conducted on a hunting tribe in South America. |          |       |               |      |

This view is contrary to what the theory of “linguistic determinism” states. Linguistic determinism puts an emphasis on language patterns. It states that language limits the perception of its users. Thus, if their language cannot define some specific concepts, then, the people who use that language cannot imagine these concepts. However, recent discoveries mentioned by the lecturer show that infants possess the ability to count numbers. Thus, at least, a part of linguistic determinism has been disproved. In the experiments, babies were shown dolls, which had been elaborately designed to draw their |               |      |

Directions: Read the question below. You have 30 minutes to plan, write, and review your essay. Usually, a good essay will contain a minimum of 300 words.

Question:

Do you agree or disagree with the opinion?

Human beings, as cohabitants of the Earth, are destroying its precious natural resources.

Do you agree or disagree with this opinion?
Use detailed examples to support your answer.

Copy   Cut   Paste   Word Count: 350

We, human beings, have been definitely destroying our precious planet. There is no doubt what we are doing is wrong because we have to survive on this planet. Therefore, I have to say that I agree with the opinion that we are destroying nature. I am not a radical who opposes the catching of whales or eating meat. I just want to find the solution by which we and nature can coexist.

In some very poor countries, people have to cut and burn saplings to warm themselves or to boil water. Some commentators in rich countries say that such practices are destroying the environment. However, these practices are necessary for the impoverished people's survival, and to try to survive is an instinct of all animals. Therefore, we should not condemn their behavior. We sometimes forget that those people in poor countries are our partners.
